AvPORTS Applauds US Supreme Court Decision To Allow Expanded Runways at Tweed-New Haven Airport

The case will open new doors to the Southern CT region

New Haven, CT — Today, the US Supreme Court announced that it will not hear a case regarding Tweed-New Haven airport, allowing it to expand the runways and attract new airline carriers. AvPORTS, the world's most experienced airport manager, has operated the airport for more than two decades.

AvPORTS CEO Jorge Roberts issued the following statement:

“This decision is a positive development for Connecticut’s economy. With the legal question settled, AvPORTS is confident that a plan for Tweed can be structured in a way that addresses the concerns of different community stakeholders and maximizes the financial benefit to both the city and the state.”

About AvPORTS
